

Antique Square Persian Numerical Kerman Rug no. j5039

Description

An early 20th-century Persian Small Kerman rug measuring 3'3" x 3'4", presents an imaginative and playful departure from classical Persian designs, merging traditional craftsmanship with a modern artistic concept. The composition features a striking grid of diamond-shaped panels, each individually numbered and filled with rich, saturated colors. The interplay of color and geometry evokes a rhythmic, almost painterly visual cadence, underscored by a lush abash that enhances its textural depth. Framed by a narrow floral border with scrolling vine motifs, the rug balances creative abstraction with Kashan's hallmark precision in weave and design. This piece likely originated from an artisan workshop experimenting with modern design vocabulary while preserving handwoven integrity. Its bold, unconventional layout and expressive palette make it not only a collectible textile but also a compelling example of how mid-century Persian weavers engaged with evolving aesthetic movements of their era.
